A Comprehensive Index to A.T. Andreas
Illustrated Historical Atlas of Minnesota - 1874

This volume serves as a finding aid to almost 15,000 Minnesotans whose names appear in Alfred T. Andreas' Illustrated Historical Atlas of the State of Minnesota, the first such atlas ever published. Landowners, businessmen, politicians, authors and prominent citizens are included in this one alphabetic, cross-referenced list. Throughout the remainder of this introduction, it will be referred to as the Index.

Published in 1874, the Atlas was conceived as a money maker on a broad scale. County wall maps listing land owners had been sold through subscriptions for some time, and the more portable county atlases with one township per page showing land owners followed. Andreas envisioned new ways to appeal to the vanity of potential buyers--ways newly possible by advances in printing technology. He would canvass (and charge) for portraits, biographies, illustrations of farms and businesses in addition to the normal patron listings. Pages could be added to a book as needed, based on sales. Andreas decided to test his vision by compiling a statewide atlas. He chose Minnesota because the state was young, the population had money, and eastern map makers had not yet worked the area.[1]

He brought together the production facilities in Chicago and hired an army: canvassers to sell subscriptions, surveyors to create plat maps, writers to produce the written materials and artists to draw the illustrations and portraits that would appear. Beginning with the influential members in a community and newspaper articles about the undertaking, his canvassers began their work.

The Index entries mirror the various appeals to vanity made by the canvassers. First, patrons purchased a listing in the Patrons' Directory and a copy of the completed Atlas. If the patron was a farmer, an entry would be made to the appropriate plat map. Canvassers then returned several more times, offering the opportunity for Minnesotans to purchase an illustration of their property (including the patron's planned improvements to the property) or write a biography or create a portrait.[2]

With separate sales waves for the various appeals, handwritten lists, remote production facilities, and Andreas' deadline of one year in which to complete the work, the Atlas was not perfect. Every name of the maps does not appear in the Patrons' Directory, and every patron does not appear on the plat maps.

Index entries:

This Index compiles all entries for the various appeals, cross-references the discrepancies, and provides one alphabetic listing to them. The Record Type column indicates from which sales appeal the entry resulted.

1. Patron: As part of the basic subscription, canvassers collected various pieces of information about individuals for publication in the Patrons' Directory. These included nativity,[3] date of arrival in Minnesota, occupation, post office and residence. Business owners often supplied their business address (instead of residence) and when the business was founded (in place of the date of arrival).

All surnames in partnerships listed in the Directory are included in this Index (e.g., Crooker Bros. & Lamoreaux is listed under both 'Crooker' and 'Lamoreaux'). The Index includes 11,737 names with all information from the Patrons' Directory, under the entry type of Patron.

Part of the appeal was to advertise the patron's business. The occupation column of this Index (from the Patrons' Directory)includes typical occupations of the day and provides some insight to what life was like in Minnesota in 1874.[4]

2. Map entry: Some 2528 names appear on the plat but are not in the Patrons' Directory in that same county and township. These were added to the Index as Map entry record types.

A plat of each organized county was published in the Atlas. The scale used in the plats differs, with a county typically taking up one or two 14" X 22" page(s). For the more sparsely populated areas, more than one county appears on a page. For example, the plat map for the northern half of the state (roughly 22 counties in 1874) has only 135 names marked on it, and covers two pages. The normal 6-mile by 6-mile township is 1/2 " X 1/2". The somewhat more developed counties of Lincoln, Lyon, Redwood, Renville and Yellow Medicine appear together on a two page spread, with 100 names inscribed, and townships of 1-3/8" X 1-3/8". Winona County is afforded a two-page spread by itself, with 391 names on the plat maps and 3-15/16" X 3-15/16" townships.

Patrons sometimes owned more than one piece of property, many of which were included on the plat maps. Andreas built his Patrons' Directory around 'residence.' In this Index, if additional property was owned in the same township, the additional section number(s) are shown in parentheses in the Patron entry. Property in other townships is listed in additional entries.

Usually the Patrons' Directory included both surname and given name, and the plat map had initials with surname. If the names and locations match (e.g. the initials were consistent with the full name), the Patron entry in this Index is marked with "Y" in the "on map" column. About 47% of the patrons matched to names on the maps, primarily those who gave 'farmer' as their occupation.

Names which appear in the Patrons' Directory but not on the maps are typically city dwellers, professionals or those not making their living from land. These are marked with a "N" in the "on map" column in this Index.

Multiple entries for an individual were NOT combined across townships or counties. Because

(4) Some, especially city residents, used this opportunity to promote their businesses. The most common listing is farmer or business connected with agriculture, such as the sale of implements or grain mills. The abbreviation P.M. (Postmaster) frequently appears in conjunction with another occupation.

the Index is one alphabetic list, references to various county plat maps will appear together for any individual.

3. Biographies: The term "Historical" in the title offered a special appeal. Canvassers sold Minnesotans the opportunity to have additional written information appear in the Atlas for $.03 a word. Of the 219 biographies included in it, nine subjects were already dead before 1874 (including Cyrus Aldrich, Augustus Armstrong, Joseph R. Brown, David Olmsted), but important enough historically for someone purchase a biography for them. All but 43 of those with biographies also have portraits, including six of the deceased men.

   Many of the biographies include family information, such as parents' names, marriage date, etc. The Atlas also includes a brief history of Minnesota, short county histories and some statistical information drawn from the Federal census of 1870. Names from these sources are not included in the Index.

   In this Index, the page number on which the biography appears in the Atlas is included in a Patron or Map entry where the name matches; otherwise a separate entry appears, as a Biography record type.

4. Portraits: Lithographs of 342 Minnesotans were included in the Atlas. As with the biographies, the page number on which the portrait appears in the Atlas is included in a Patron or Map entry where the name matches; if not, a separate Portrait entry appears.

5. Illustrations: Many pages of the Atlas are given to illustrating farms, residences, businesses, and churches. A total of 664 businesses and individuals are named with the various illustrations, with approximately half matching to Patron or Map entries.

   Birds' eye views of Eyota (Olmsted Co.), Appleton (Swift Co.), Granite Falls (Yellow Medicine Co.), Montevideo (Chippewa Co.), Preston (Fillmore Co.), Sauk Rapids (Benton Co.), and Waseca (Waseca Co.) appear with various business and individual residences included in the captions. This Index includes separate entries for each name given in a caption. In addition, each separate business or name on a building is also included in this Index. The page number on which the illustration appears in the Atlas is included in a Patron or Map entry where the name matches; otherwise a separate entry appears.

6. See also: Where at all likely, entries in this Index were cross referenced by including a second name in the "See also" column. Compare all information given in the entries, as cross references could result from several different situations.

   Typographical errors: Both the Patrons' Directory and the map entries used handwritten sources for their information. Some discrepancies between the typeset Directory listing and the map entry for the individual are the likely results from confusion in reading the handwriting; others are just mistakes. For example, confusion between the handwritten "R" and "B" combined with a typographical error could account for the surname RIBEAU in the Patrons' Directory and BIBAU on the Ramsey Co. map for New Canada township. The family name is most likely BIBEAU. When names are involved in potential typographical errors, additional entries were made for the Index.

   Errors were not limited to people's names. The date for arrival in Minnesota for H.E. Broughton (St. Charles City, Winona Co.) was given as 1374, an unlikely year. J. Huntley of Marine, Washington Co. is listed in Section 45 (a typical township has 36 sections). Some township names differ between the Patrons' Directory and the maps, such as Haws Creek/Hawk Creek, Renville County. Location errors were marked with sic; arrival dates were changed to 18--; township names were adjusted to match the township list included in the Atlas.

Unfamiliarity with foreign names: Many settlers came directly to Minnesota from Europe, especially from Scandinavian countries. Patronymic names presented special difficulties to the canvassers. For example, in heavily Norwegian Spring Grove and Wilmington townships, Houston Co., the map entries are listed in a different name format from the Patrons' Directory. Such Patron and Map entries are cross referenced. Norwegian settlements in other areas did not seem to present the same problem. Whether those canvassers understood the language better and translated the patronymics into the American language, or were just better at preparing their lists cannot be determined in the absence of Andreas' business records.

Spelling variations: Some name entries in the Patrons' Directory are likely spelling variations of the names entered on the plat maps. For example, BELDIN and BELDING, SKILLINGS and SKILLING are cross-referenced in this Index.

Location variations: In other cases, the names in the entries agree, but the township or section did not. These were also cross-referenced in this Index. No effort was made to determine if an error was made in typesetting the Patrons' Directory, or in writing the name on the map. Often these would be in the contiguous section or township from the one given in the Patrons' Directory.

Hints on using this Index:

Only those who subscribed in some fashion were included in the Atlas. Many other Minnesotans owned land and/or businesses, but did not choose to participate. Higher percentages of participation to population lie along major rivers and in the metropolitan areas of the day, where settlement tended to be earlier.

The Atlas cannot be considered as a primary source; it is, however, a place to start. Land, school, and church records can be consulted more easily when a specific section of land in a specific township and county are known.

The many cross references underline the importance of checking alternate spellings for names, as well as of looking at those who share surnames. Handwriting can be subject to various interpretations, and typeset documents (including the Patrons' Directory) sometimes conceal similarities. Even the carefully printed names on the plat maps can be read differently. Look especially at the following pairs which can cause confusion: u/n; oin/om; e/c; S/L; B/R.[5]

The boundaries of Minnesota's counties and townships continued to change for some time after publication of the Atlas. In fact, while the Atlas was in production, part of West St. Paul township, Dakota County, became part of the City of St. Paul, Ramsey County. Records could be in the county at the time of the event, or could have been passed to the new county.

Township and county names also continued to change. What was Lebanon township in Dakota County was changed to Apple Valley almost 100 years after the Atlas was published. Townships or counties can disappear from censuses or county histories because of these name changes.

Refer to an original copy, if possible, for looking at the plat maps. Estimates (based on the supplies mentioned in the Atlas) show that 10-12,000 copies were published in 1874. This number is consistent with the number of entries in the Patrons' Directory. Original copies can still be found in various libraries and private collections. County historical societies in Minnesota may have the plat map for their county, even if they do not have the complete volume in their collection. The entire Atlas was reprinted in a reduced page size by the Winona County Historical Society; copies are available from various sources. The Genealogical Society Library in Salt Lake City has microfilmed it. The colored plat maps from the original source are difficult to read on the reproductions.

Minnesota Counties in 1874

The Atlas contains comparative statistics for Minnesota and other states, based on the 1870 federal census. Some changes in the county boundaries occurred between those counties represented in that census and the publication of the Atlas, notably the 'move' of Lac Qui Parle to the south side of the Minnesota River. People living in Chippewa, Kandiyohi, Lac Qui Parle, Lincoln, Lyon, Swift, Redwood or Yellow Medicine counties in 1874 may be in a different county for the 1870 census.

By 1874, most counties in the southern part of the state had realized the same boundaries they have today. However, the northern part of the state was sparsely settled, and counties were much larger than the current day counties. The county designations in the Index are consistent with this map.

Andreas included a two-page map of Minnesota in his Atlas. The post offices, villages, and railway stations listed in this Index are generally found on that map.
